

Rudolf Steiner University College & Camphill Vidaråsen

Introduction to social pedagogy

Experience-based 60 ECTS course

Rudolf Steiner University College (RSUC) and Camphill Vidaråsen are proud to present a new experience-based introductory course in social pedagogy. The course consists of selected modules from the bachelor's degree in social pedagogy and takes place at Camphill Vidaråsen in Andebu, Norway. The course is combined with co-working at Vidaråsen, creating an ongoing synergic effect between theoretical and practical knowledge.

In this unique education, RSUC collaborates with Camphill Vidaråsen to provide an experience-based education for co-workers living at Vidaråsen. If you want to become part of a Camphill Village, Vidaråsen can offer a home together with our residents, other co-workers, and volunteers, in an international anthroposophical and ecological environment.

In addition, you can now complete a two-year part-time course, where you get 60 internationally recognized credits in social pedagogy. The course will be an integrated part of the daily work life at Vidaråsen, consisting of one day of lectures and exercises per week.

Bachelor's degree in social pedagogy

This introductory course consists of selected modules from RSUC's bachelor's degree in social pedagogy. The bachelor's degree is aimed at people working in the fields of special education in Waldorf schools and social therapy in anthroposophical communities. It will be relevant whether you work in schools with children and young people or with adults in shared housing and other institutions.

Fee: 11 650 NOK per term (15 ECTS). Vidaråsen sponsors each co-worker with 50% of the fee. Students pay a total of 23 300 NOK for the entire course consisting of four terms. (60 ECTS).

Camphill Vidaråsen

Vidaråsen Village is a living- and working-community for both people with and without learning disabilities. Vidaråsen was founded in 1966 and is one of six Camphill villages in Norway. Vidaråsen is an innovative social enterprise, where sustainability inspires a rounded work and life sharing situation for everyone.

Vidaråsen offers this education to co-workers who commit to two years of internship. The education is combined with living and working at Vidaråsen. The lectures will be held at Vidaråsen weekly.
